This $3\frac{1}{2}$ story, 3 bay wide brick and stone town house dates c. 1860. It is a typical Baltimore town house of the period, with the exception of the somewhat rare attic windows, which are unusual for a house of this size.

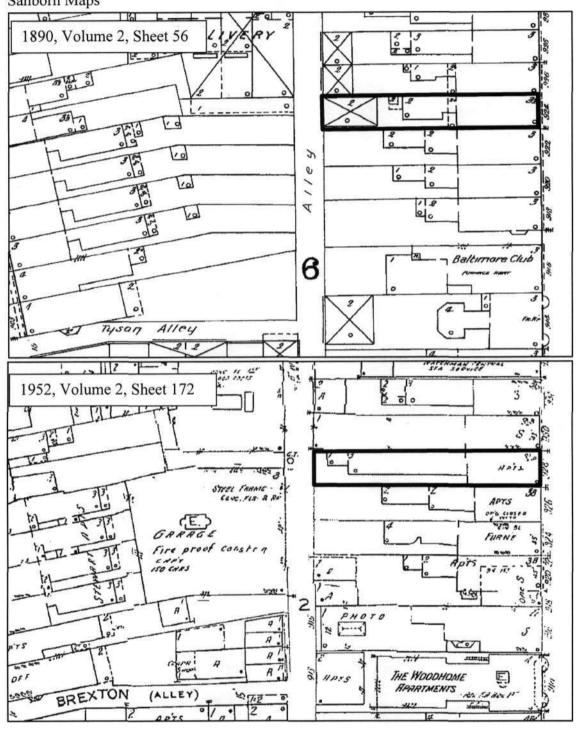

The tall, narrow house rests on a marble base, which is punctured by two basement windows with iron grills. They are separated from the first floor windows by a marble belt course. Thick marble sills support tall, narrow windows with flat brick arches. All window openings above the basement are filled with jalousies of recent vintage. The main entrance is reached by a short flight of marble steps running to the house. The round-arched entrance is frame by marble drip moldings with an accentuated keystone. A semi-circular transom is above the doorway.

Second, third and attic level windows have projecting marble sills supported on stubby brackets of Romano-Tuscan derivation, and flat brick arches top all but the attic windows. A wide wooden cornice is terminated by overscaled brackets thrusting up into pedimental forms which flank descending rows of modillions, dentils and guilloche.
